TO A STANDSTILL
IN FLORIDA KEYS*Indicating That It Might Be

High Tides Churned; Violent

Strike Area

By James Russell

(U. S. S. Staff Correspondent)

MIAMI, Fla., Sept. 21.—(INS)—The intense tropical hurricane that struck the Florida keys and neared Miami slowed down almost to a standstill today, indicating that it might be changing direction.

The Miami weather bureau advisory, issued at 4:30 a. m. (EST), said the Caribbean storm started to weaken its forward speed after crossing Cuba. The advisory said: "The hurricane became distorted crossing Cuba and that may mean change in course."

Earlier reports said the hurricane was expected to reach the heavily populated area of around Miami before noon, but the latest advisory explained its arrival in the Florida metropolis might be delayed several hours.

The hurricane, however, seemed to have lost none of its intensity with winds at its center still whirling about at the rate of 100 miles an hour.

Winds as high as 70 miles an hour were reported in Key West, the southernmost city in the Florida keys. Miami reported gusts up to 60 miles an hour.

The storm struck the keys around midnight, sweeping the picturesque islands with strong winds and burning up high tides.

Violent rain squalls and destructive winds sent residents of Miami and the chain of tiny islands scurrying to safety in storm shelters.

All along the lower Florida coast, storm plans were put into effect. Storm refugees crowded into school buildings and other sturdy-built structures listed by the Red Cross as safe.

The fierce winds swelled the waters around the Florida keys into high tides that swept over portions of the shore line.

Rising water covered parts of and at a large Navy housing project in Key West.

The storm rolled out of the turbulent Caribbean and over the Cuban mainland last night, lashing Havana with 36-mile-an-hour winds and causing rivers to overflow their banks in two Cuban provinces.

First reports of property damage from Cuba were light.

Utility poles and trees were reported uprooted on some of the islands.

Straus Store Is Being Improved by New Front

Work was started yesterday morning on the installation of a completely new and modern storefront at Straus Cut Rate, 197 Mill street.

Following the trend in current design, an all-glass front will replace the old front. New fixtures, a neon sign, and other improvements are listed in the specifications.

A spokesman for the store this morning said "this is the latest step in our expansion program in our 27 years of business in Bristol, and we are sure it will add greatly to the shopping comfort of customers, and will be an improvement to Bristol's main shopping district. The new front will give us greater floor space in the store proper, and new display cases will be added."

He remained in Abington Hospital from Friday until Sunday, and is now reported as doing fine at his parents' home. Richard is also under quarantine at present. Duff Promises "War"
On Highway Fatalities

HARRISBURG, Sept. 21.—(INS)—A "relentless war" against highway fatalities in Pennsylvania was promised today by Gov. James H. Duff's newly-created Highway Safety Advisory Committee.

Acting Revenue Secretary Otto P. Messner, committee chairman, announced that the group yesterday approved plans to divide the state into traffic zones to handle the campaign locally. A strong safety organization will be developed in each under state supervision and local authorities, civic groups, motor clubs and educational leaders will be urged to join, he said.

A program of activities will be prepared for each zone committee and co-ordinated by the Safety Committee, Messner explained.

He said the Governor established the committee "to wage a relentless war" against carelessness and recklessness by motorists and pedestrians.

Pennsylvania's record today on motor vehicle fatalities compared to other states is good but not good enough, he declared. "We propose to leave nothing undone to bring that toll down and to keep bringing it down."

"There will be no let down. This committee means business."

Other officers named at the organizational meeting are: State Police Commissioner C. M. Wilhelm, vice-chairman; Director of Highway Safety T. E. Truesdale, director and secretary; and members, Ivan J. Stehman, director of highway safety education; W. H. Herman, chief research engineer, State Highways Department; and Arthur G. TO COMBINE TWO
OFFICES OF RED
CROSS LOCALLY*Home Service and Lower
Bucks Co. Branch Offices
To Be in One Building*RADCLIFFE - FRANKLIN*3 Large Rooms Are Being Leased in Former Wagner
Hospital Building

In order to serve Red Cross and its various departments more effectively, two offices operated by American Red Cross in lower Bucks County are to be combined here. The offices affected are home service at 129 Mill street, this borough, and the office of the Lower Bucks County Branch of the Red Cross at Langhorne.

A lease is now being prepared, with the Red Cross office personnel planning to move sometime in October to new quarters at the corner of Radcliffe and Franklin streets. This structure, which for many years in the past housed the Wagner private hospital, now houses a number of offices for professional and business people. Three large rooms will be occupied by the Red Cross, one on the second floor and two on the first. "This move is also in the interest of economy," stated a Red Cross representative today, who added that the floor space will considerably exceed that of the present office on Mill street.

With the transfer of the branch and home services quarters to one building, there will be housed under one roof all activities of Red Cross for this area—home service, first aid, volunteer services such as for hospitals and veterans "Gray Ladies", home nursing, disaster, etc. Langhorne office has been the administration department of Red Cross in this area, caring for chapter services extended into the branch. Through it were handled all other services exclusive of home service. The home service office on Mill street covers the entire county.

"With concentration of services in one building, we feel we will serve Red Cross needs more effectively," stated a Red Cross representative today. The move was approved at a recent meeting of district representatives, held at Langhorne. Districts involved are: continued on Page Two

Alfred E. Lewis, administrative head of the local center, reported that due to the surprisingly large number of people interested in taking the courses who have not as yet registered, further registration will be permitted on the opening night of school and will be taken at the Bristol high school. Open UN Sessions with Condemnation of Paris.—The third session of the United Nations General Assembly opened in Paris today with a sharp and eloquent condemnation of "government by force."

This keynote of the crucial 58 nation meeting was sounded by Juan Atilio Bramuglia, Foreign Minister of Argentina. He presided at the meeting because he outranked Dr. Jose Arce, last president of the assembly and permanent Argentine delegate.

Bramuglia mentioned no specific country by name but it was clear to observers that he was attacking the Soviet concept of government by force.

Blame Deadlock on Soviet Monetary Reform Failure

Paris.—Authoritative diplomatic sources revealed today that Soviet failure to keep a promise on monetary reform led to the deadlock in Berlin.

An original agreement providing for four-power control of a single Soviet currency in Berlin in exchange for lifting of the blockade was not fulfilled. As a result, the deadlock drifted into the crisis stage.

REPORT ON DIVORCE

A report on divorce procedure presented by a committee of the American Bar Association at the National Conference on Family Life, last May, has now been turned over to the House of Delegates at the association's annual meeting in Seattle. It was presented by Judge Paul W. Alexander of the division of domestic relations of the common pleas court of Toledo. He is chairman of the bar association's committee which fashioned the report.

The report makes suggestions as to the manner of handling the growing number of divorce cases. The subject is approached constructively in a manner similar to that of cases of juvenile delinquency in later years. It holds that the broken family is not the result of divorce, but divorce is the result of the broken family.

In fact, husbands and wives divorce themselves long before they get into court. In 8,000 cases heard in a midwestern city contracting parties had been separated an average of two years before seeking legal divorce.

Divorce is a result, not a cause, of broken families. The real causes are drunkenness, cruelty, desertion, infidelity and other actions formerly regarded as sinful. Marriage fails, the report definitely shows, because the contracting parties fail to make it a success.

AS BRITONS TELL IT

Cigarettes are expensive in Britain and as a result, according to a recent press dispatch, many confirmed smokers are giving up the habit. Furthermore, they are making a virtue and even a sort of game out of necessity. It seems every other person has a snug tale about "How I quit smoking."

These stories are curious enough, in some cases, to bear repeating. One man's system includes two calculations—one that it would cost him $17,500 to smoke the remaining 35 of his three score and 10 years, with cigarettes at 70 cents a pack, and the other that he can get 2,720 bottles of gin for that much money.

He is worried that the gin won't last for much more than 20 years, but he hasn't had a smoke for a week.

Smokers generally, while they may concede that Britons may be better off without the habit, will suspect that all this conversation only means that misery loves company.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

On The Lowest Level

Washington, Sept. 21. IN THIS great better-sklitter, heterogeneous nation, afflicted as it is with universal, unrestricted suffrage and a voting population of approximately 60,000,000, a considerable amount of claptrap is unescapable in every campaign. All party platforms make transparent appeals to prejudices and publicly record promises, the sincerity of which is plain to the discerning. Even the very best candidates are compelled to demagogue a little.

—o—
THIS is part of the price we pay for our system of government and, despite admitted evils, many believe it not too high. Discouraging things about the present period are, first, that demagoguery has increased in volume; second, it has diminished in quality; third, evidence that the most blatant demagoguery pays in politics has piled higher than ever before. Competent and detached observers of the Washington scene would find it hard to dispute these facts. It is ardently to be hoped that as President Truman and Governor Dewey start west their utterances will lift the contest to a level that will not affront the intelligence nor degrade the high office they seek. Mr. Dewey has done no oratorical campaigning and therefore cannot be justly charged—as yet—with such unsavory political strategy, though there has been a certain tendency in that direction upon the part of one or two not greatly responsible persons on his side.

—o—
UNFORTUNATELY, this is not true of the Democrats. Perhaps it was inevitable that, based on the Roosevelt lines, their campaign should be on a low plane, as no presidential candidate ever more calculatingly exploited the ignorance and passions of the unreasoning than Mr. Truman's predecessor. Nevertheless, the spectacle of the President of the United States going the shameful limit (even if only as an initiator) in the effort to sway special groups of voters, regardless of how great the misrepresentations involved or what the effect upon the country as a whole is—really dismaying. The antics and speeches of the inflamed and unbalanced Mr. Wallace and his Communist third party, though disgusting, may be dismissed as unimportant. But, so far as revealed, the character of the campaign made by—and for—Mr. Truman cannot be so dismissed. It is easy—and truthful to say he is simply, if ineptly, following Mr. Roosevelt, but that does not excuse it.

—o—
FOR one thing, Mr. Truman is not the natural and highly skilled demagogue Mr. Roosevelt was. Nothing excuses it—not even its failure. Actually, Mr. Truman already has gone such lengths in his struggle for the backing of organized labor on the one hand and the Negroes in the big Northern cities on the other as to merit almost unanimous rebuke from the independent press of the country. The contention of those who believe the Truman tactics stupid as well as bad is that he might have won this fight if he had just been himself. Instead he has been persuaded by the cheap little politicians around him that the only way he can be elected is by corraling the labor union and Negro votes in the way and to the degree that Mr. Roosevelt did. Only by traveling that road, he has been told, can he gain the support of the "Roosevelt element" as represented by his widow, his son, his daughter and the more conspicuous New Deal ex-jobholders, none of whom are very political.

—o—
THESE allegedly smart advisers have overlooked three important things—first, that lacking his congenital demagogic talents, Mr. Truman cannot perform along the indicated lines as convincingly or effectively as did Mr. Roosevelt; second, that the old Roosevelt game of both ends against the middle has been played out. It is no longer possible to reassemble what was called the "Roosevelt combination." Even Mr. Roosevelt could not do it now. Third, it isn't necessary for Mr. Truman to placate the "Roosevelt element" as the "Roosevelt element" as above described has no choice except to give him lukewarm support, which is all they are giving him anyhow. However, Mr. Truman appears to have taken the advice of his poorest advisers.

—o—
AT ANY rate, along with blanket denunciation of the Republican Congress so far his campaign has been largely a transparent appeal to these two groups—organized labor and the Negroes. To the labor bosses he promises repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act and uses their own adjectives in denouncing it, utterly ignoring the fact that a majority of the Democrats in Congress voted for it—and the people as a whole favor it. To the Negroes, through one of his closest aides and advisers, Mr. Oscar R. Ewing, head of the Federal Security Agency, recently made an appeal in Richmond so crude and absurd that the Negroes themselves resented it. Among other things, they were told by Mr. Ewing that the Republican party is plotting to take his "rights" away from the Negro and that any

Negro who does not vote for Harry Truman is "betraying his race" because Harry Truman would make it impossible for anyone ever again to call him a "slave."

—o—
IT IS difficult to see how you could put a campaign on a lower plane. Long before the election it is clear this strategy has lost Mr. Truman the electoral vote of several indispensable Southern states and arrayed against him not only big business but little business—and without getting anything like the solid labor support for which he is so desperately bidding. It is also doubtful whether he will get a majority of the Northern Negroes. Many of these will go for Wallace—many more for Dewey. It is certainly an unpleasant exhibition. But if, as a result, it teaches that, despite the record of the last sixteen years, this grade of claptrap and class appeal does not really pay, it will have been in the national interests. In any event, there should be no temptation for Governor Dewey to compete along those lines. In 1944, to some extent he did try to compete. Now, headily with Mr. Roosevelt—which was a mistake. Then the odds were against him. This time they are the other way. That should not make a difference—but it always does.

A Summary of The News

Governor Dewey formally opened his Presidential campaign in Des Moines. He promised to restore unity at home and to conduct foreign affairs in the firm conviction that the world could have peace. His speech was conciliatory and he made no attempt to reply to President Truman's charges against the Republicans.

Hurricane Slows to a Standstill In Florida Keys keys. Waters from the heavy rains caused sections of the ceiling to fall in at the Key West airport weather station.

Scenes reminiscent of wartime displaced persons camps were enacted in hurricane shelters in Miami, Palm Beach and along the 100-mile-long chain of islands that form the keys group.

Fifty-three pre-designated Red Cross shelters were thrown open at 10 p. m., and most of them filled up quickly.

Hurricane warning flags fluttered along the lower Florida coasts from Melbourne through the keys on the east shores and from Fort Myers to Key West on the gulf side of the peninsula.

Precise precautions—which were planned months ago—were taken. Up and down Miami's palm-lined Biscayne Boulevard and along busy Flagler street, smart shops and department stores nailed up drab boards and metal shutters to ward off hurricane damage.

Twenty-three naval vessels rushed from the Key West base and sought safety in the middle gulf.

Full train crews were dispatched to Fort Pierce, on the east coast, to man 50 railroad cars that will be sent into the Everglades farming regions if evacuation is necessary.

The Navy at Key West posted a hurricane condition No. 1 early last night, and families of naval personnel gathered in well-stocked shelters on the base.

The Red Cross mobilized an army of disaster workers to staff the storm shelters.

In Miami, cautious residents boarded up their stores and latched storm shutters on their homes. Small craft were docked far up the bay.

MORRISVILLE LOSES

TRENTON, Sept. 21—Don Wollman's 82-yard end run for a touchdown early in the game paved the way for a Trenton Catholic victory over Morrisville High last night under the floodlights on Dunn's field. Final score was 12-6. Wollman, a 200-pound sophomore, broke loose on the third play of the game and running behind beautiful interference made his touchdown. Trenton Catholic meets Bristol High Friday night, also on Dunn's field.

Small Brothers Celebrate Their Natal Anniversaries

NEWPORTVILLE, Sept. 21—Mrs. William Fowler arranged a birthday party on Sunday afternoon for her two sons, "Billy," five years old, and George, three. The table was tastefully decorated in pink, white and blue, and favors were balloons.

The children attending "Billy" Beach, "Billy" and Marilyn Scott, Paul and Rosemary Marra, Sharon Lee Ciechelski, George and Sharon Casperson, Roy Clark, Alice Ann Fowler, Fergusonville, Mary Alice Thompson, of Philadelphia, Billy and George received gifts.

Miami River in comparatively safe waters.

All air lines cancelled flights in and out of Miami. Pan American Airways halted operations from Miami of its far-flung Latin American Division.

Many of the big airliners were flown to safer bases north of the storm area, along with military planes from Key West and Miami.

Hus service was cancelled. Miami's public schools were closed for study, and most of them were turned into storm shelters.

Nation Guard units in Miami were placed in a general state of readiness.

added the third year. Shade houses were advocated with slats running north and south.

Azaleas, magnolias, dogwood and cottonwoods, said Mr. Flesser, are experimented mainly within these propagation tests.

Mr. Flesser also escorted the group to the evergreen nursery, where junipers, cypresses, arbor vitae and hemlocks were seen. The English yew was cited as being of fine color, and lending weight to ornamental planting. Pruning and training of evergreens were strongly advocated.

Following a box lunch in the woods on the campus and a brief business session in charge of the president, Stevenson W. Fletcher, Newtown, in Segal Hall, David M. Funnell, instructor of horticulture, with the use of charts, spoke upon the botanical features of the apple, which he defined as a fleshy pome with cells formed by papery cartilaginous membranes with a juicy flesh.

Seeding is not considered a successful method for growing apple trees. The mutation of seedlings with the resultant sports was explained. Budding and grafting are accepted procedures, and temperatures at about 75 degrees are best suited to apples. The state of Washington, said Mr. Funnell, is ideal for such fruit, because it does not have temperatures too high for firmness nor temperatures so low as to injure the sensitive stem.

Another speaker was Henry Schmieder, whose subject was the biological relationships between insects and plant production. Bees

Inside Your Congress

No Russian Place Like Home

—by—
SAMUEL B. PETTENGILL
"The Gentleman from Indiana"

The presidium of the supreme Russian Soviet has just decreed that every Russian has the right to build and own a home. Nothing demonstrates the failure and abandonment of communism better than that. Ivan can now build a home of his own with his own hands, or buy a pre-fabricated house, or use the help of a co-operative home-building organization. This is the best compliment the Soviets could pay to the private property system—the right to own a house, to have a key to it, and to tell the world to go hence.

It has been the proud boast of the British freeman that the mud and rain might enter the poor man's cottage, but the King could not. "Communist" Russia is moving to adopt that ancient principle. The British Socialists are abandoning it.

But there is more to the story of Russia's retreat to individualism. To encourage thrift and create incentives to work and save, Russian savings banks pay the depositor 5%. In the United States, the depositor gets from 1 to 2%. The average is probably 1 1/2%. In short, $1,000 saved in Russia earns $50 interest a year; in the U.S.A., $15 a year. The Russian savings bank depositor gets three times as much interest as the American. However, his savings may be confiscated by the government, as was done, in part, a few months ago.

Savings bank interest is not taxed in Russia; in the U.S.A., it is. Uncle Sam takes a fifth, or more, in taxes from the $15 interest on a $100 deposit, that leaves no more than $12 as against $50, net, in the Russian savings bank.

The Russian is also encouraged to buy government bonds by hoping to draw a lucky number in a lottery which goes on constantly. A single Russian savings bank, in three months, notified 2472 depositors that they were prize winners. 184 of them got large sums. The highest prize was 50,000 rubles.

The American Socialist who thinks the Soviets have abolished "the profit system" is hopelessly behind the times. A Moscow dispatch to the New York Herald Tribune says: "Following a recent warning against factories operating at a loss, a number of Soviet plants are now earning impressive profits. For the first four months of 1948, the Stalin automobile plant earned 11,000,000 rubles' profit; a ball-bearing plant 8,000,000 rubles, and an electric plant 4,000,000 rubles."

Once we paid men for what they did as individuals rather than a uniform rate for the number of hours between clock punchings. As we abandon individual rewards, the Russians adopt them. They go to great length to increase the reward according to the work done. They use piece-work pay wherever possible, or some other production-bonus system. Our labor union leaders are against such methods. They don't want their members to get anything on their own, but only through the labor boss. That is why the N.L.R.B. held it was an unfair labor practice for an employer to raise wages without going through the labor bosses, so they could get the credit.

According to Arthur Koestler's "THE YOGI AND THE COMMISSAR," the "spread" in pay between the unskilled and skilled worker, or manager, in a Russian factory is greater than here.

The political system in Russia has nothing in its favor. It is a brutal police state. But its economic system began to abolish Communism as far back as 1922. It continues to do so. The realistic Russians know that equal pay to worker and shirker alike is a failure. If they continue to adopt incentive systems and the principles of private capitalism for another 25 years, the new Russian Czars may find that they have written their own death sentence.

by a scout of the troop was presented to Lower Makefield Troop No. 10 for a story which was written by Michael Andriola.

Scout Andriola had the privilege of reading his story during the patriotic program. After the patriotic program, the Scouts visited museum where they had an opportunity to see many of the things of historic interest at Valley Forge. After eating lunch, the Scouts participated in an historic tour, on a unit basis, under the direction of Thomas Ross, Jr., and John Zeder, and assisted by members of the Commissioners staff. The boys hiked over the entire area and reported back to headquarters before leaving for home. Chocolate bars were distributed to those who participated in this part of the program.

'Presidents' Memorial Drive' To Be Dedicated Sept. 28th

WASHINGTON CROSSING, Sept. 21—Dedication of "Presidents' Memorial Drive" at Bowman's Hill is set for Tuesday, Sept. 28th, the hour for the dedicatory ceremony being 11:30 a. m.

On this occasion presidents of women's clubs and other organizations are to be paid special tribute through the planting of flowering shrubbery along the main drive through the Bowman's Hill State Wildlife Preserve.

The affair will be part of "Pennsylvania Week" celebration. During that week "open house in Penn's Woods" is to be conducted in 12 public parks.

Those participating are asked to gather at the pavilion in the park at 11:30. The group will go to the roadside for token planting of a shrub in special tribute to Mrs. J. Stewart Williams, of Kensington, president of Penna. Federation of Women's Clubs. Future plantings will be held as each president concludes her term of office. Redbud, mountain laurel, white dogwood, etc., will memorialize past presidents and deceased club leaders along the 2500 foot of roadway.

Serving as chairman of the program is Mrs. Charles Harper Smith of Hahoboro, secretary of the Washington Crossing Park Commission. During the afternoon there will be tours through the park trails.

THREE NEW MEN OUT FOR PRACTICE WITH ST. ANN'S

Three new candidates reported for the St. Ann's A. A. football team at its practice session on Leedom's field. The three are backfield men and appear to fit in the lineup very well.

"Al" Monti, who played with Lower Bucks A. C. last season, will try to make a fullback berth. Monti is noted for his long kicks. Last season when Lower Bucks played St. Ann's it was Monti's booting which prevented the "Saints" from scoring several more touchdowns.

The quarterback position, which looked like a weak spot, was strengthened considerably by "Charlie" Pistilli, who played with the San Diego Naval Base team for two seasons. The other candidate is "Al" Spada, of Philadelphia.

The Saints open their season against the Norristown Red Roses next Wednesday night under the lights on the Bristol High School field. On the following Tuesday, the Saints will play the LaMott Catholic Club also on the high school field.

Manager "Lou" Niccols is now completing the St. Ann's schedule which is expected to be announced in a week or so. Leon Chalella is aiding Niccols with the schedule.

HEMET, Cal. (HNS)—Hugh Morgan is convinced of the truth in the saying that a dog is "man's best friend."

Morgan's dog, Shep, raised such a din with his barking at 3 a. m. that Morgan rose to investigate and found the lower floor of his home a mass of flames. Rousing a cousin, Morgan led the way to safety.

BOWLING OPENER SEES WIDE SCORE RANGE

The Bristol Major Bowling League opened its 1948-49 bowling season, Monday evening, Sept. 13th on the local alleys. It was a typical opening night resulting in a wide range of scores.

Top honors for the evening went to Warner & Sons. While winning three points from Auto Boys, they compiled a 2673 grand total, led by "Sam" Deltrick's 615 series.

Lamon duplicated Deltrick's 615 total and led his Rohm & Haas team in taking two points from the Moose. Phipps was high man for the Moose with a 528 total.

Fairweather's Cafe, strengthened with the addition of "Kemp's" Riccardo to the line-up, nosed out Lucas Motors two games to one. High man on Fairweather's quintet was Cahill with a 550 total, and Fahy was tops for Lucas Motors, rolling 549 for the three games.

The remaining match game was the closest one of the evening. Dependable Paint took two points from St. Ann's, although St. Ann's total was three pins better than Dependable's total. Cavanaugh was high man in this match with a 511 series.
